2020 VISION: SEEING CLEARLY IN A LIMINAL SPACE

As we enter the third decade of the 21st century, our ability to see clearly into the future is more difficult than it ever was, largely because it seems that we have entered a liminal space – that place of transition between where we were and where we will be, without fully knowing where we are: What will happen with the OECD's efforts to bring consistency to conflicting national tax policies? What is the future for EU tax policies given growing tensions in the EU and its (remaining) member countries? What is the state of Chinese / US relations and China's global influence and where are they going?

Join us in Vienna 6-8 May 2020 to sharpen your vision and see with greater clarity through a series of plenary sessions and workshops in which Taxanders and outside speakers will address the past, the present and the future of the global economic and political order, the work of the OECD and its impacts, and particular areas of greatest concern to tax professionals including transfer pricing, indirect tax, real estate tax, DAC6, and a post-Brexit UK and EU.

Our confirmed speakers include:

David Rennie, Beijing bureau chief and Chaguan columnist for the Economist and formerly the Economist's Washington bureau chief and Lexington columnist;

Achim Pross, Head of the International Co-operation and Tax Administration division of the OECD's Centre for Tax Policy and Administration.

A formal invitation will follow in the new year at which time you will also have the opportunity to choose which three workshops you wish to participate in from amongst the 11 we will be offering.
