General: Transfer Pricing Framework

The arm's length principle is incorporated into Swedish domestic law (Chapter 14, section 19 of the Income Tax Act, "ITA"). The arm's length principle is also incorporated into Sweden's double tax agreements, which are in turn based on Article 9 of the OECD's Model Tax Convention. The Swedish transfer pricing regulations are normally interpreted based on the principles laid down in the OECD Guidelines. This is not explicitly stated in the Swedish legislation but is based on statements made by the Swedish Supreme Administrative Court (RÅ 1991 ref. 107). It should be noted that the Swedish Tax Agency "STA" generally believe that new versions of the OECD Guidelines are applicable retroactively and viewed as clarifications of the arm's length principle.

Accepted Transfer Pricing Methodologies

The OECD Guidelines is implemented by decisions from the Swedish Supreme Administrative Court. Consequently, the methods described in the OECD Guidelines are all accepted. The method used must, however, reflect the functional, risk and asset profile of the parties in the transaction. The applied method should be deemed appropriate from an arm's length perspective.

In summary, the most appropriate pricing method providing the most reliable measure of an arm's length result in each case should be selected on a transaction-by-transaction basis. It is further accepted to apply other methods as long as it can be demonstrated that it results in arm's length pricing.

The most common methods are the transactional net margin method "TNMM" for routine entities and the comparable uncontrolled price method "CUP" especially for financial transactions and license fees. The use of the profit split method "PSM" is still rather uncommon although it is becoming increasingly adopted by taxpayers.

Transfer Pricing Documentation Requirements

Sweden has implemented transfer pricing documentation (master and local file) requirements in line with the OECD Guidelines. An unlimited taxable company that carries out transactions with a limited taxable company abroad within the same group must provide transfer pricing documentation. Transactions between Swedish entities are exempt from documentation; however, the transactions should still be priced at arm's length. This is particularly important in case the Swedish entities lack group contribution rights or if the entities have restrictions on tax losses carried forward.

To be exempted from the transfer pricing documentation requirements, such companies must, in the year that precedes the tax year, have fewer than 250 employees and either an annual turnover of no more than SEK 450 million or a balance sheet total of no more than SEK 400 million.

According to Swedish law, it is not required to document immaterial transactions in a local file. The materiality of the transactions is based on the size and operations of the local entity. Large transactions or transactions key to the core operations are considered material. There is, however, an exemption related to the total value of the transactions. If the transactions with a foreign controlled entity are less than SEK 5 million during the financial year, the transaction is per definition considered immaterial. The transaction should however still be priced in accordance with the arm's length principle. For intangible assets, the exemption is only applicable if the intangible assets do not pertain to the company's core business.

The documentation shall consist of two parts, a master file and local file. It may be prepared in Swedish, Danish, Norwegian or English. The master file must be prepared no later than the time when the parent company in the group must submit its income tax return. The local file must be prepared no later than the time when the Swedish company must submit its income tax return.

The transfer pricing documentation is to be submitted to the STA upon request. There is no timeframe specified by the law for how long the company may have to submit the master- and local file. Consequently, the timeframe is decided by the STA on a case-by-case basis depending on how long the company needs. Normal practice for the STA is, however, to request the documentation within 30 days.

The transfer pricing documentation must be kept available for seven years after the end of the calendar year in which the fiscal year ended.

Sweden has also enacted the country-by-country reporting "CbCR" rules in line with the OECD Guidelines. The rules apply to groups with revenues exceeding SEK 7 billion. The CbCR must be submitted within 12 months of the end of the relevant fiscal year. CbCR notifications should be submitted to the STA by all Swedish entities of a group liable to prepare the CbCR by the end of the relevant fiscal year.

Local Jurisdiction Benchmarks

Sweden follows the guidance described in the OECD Guidelines regarding comparability analysis. There is generally no specific preference for domestic comparables over foreign comparables, however the comparables should be independent and have a clear comparability. The STA usually refers to multiple year data and the interquartile range in terms of benchmarking. In line with the OECD Guidelines, the benchmark should be updated every three years, unless no substantial changes have occurred that prompts an update. A financial update should be conducted every year as best practise. However, the STA would not necessarily question a benchmark for which no financial update has been made.

Advance Pricing Agreement/Bilateral Advance Pricing Agreement "BAPA" Overview

APA procedures in Sweden are initiated by the taxpayer by sending a written application to the competent authority which is part of the STA. Apart from Swedish companies, foreign companies with permanent establishments in Sweden are also allowed to apply for an APA. The taxpayer is generally given the possibility to meet the STA to discuss the APA prior to submitting the application, should the taxpayer want to. An APA application may only cover complex issues and major transactions. A question is not considered complex if the application of the arm's length principle in the current situation is not unclear.

Bilateral and multilateral APAs are accepted in Sweden and the arrangements are entered through a mutual agreement procedure regime in the applicable tax treaty (article 25, mutual agreement procedure, OECD:s Model Tax Convention on Income and on Capital). As such, APAs are only available if there is a tax treaty in force between Sweden and the foreign tax jurisdiction. Unilateral APAs are not accepted in Sweden.

The fee for an APA is SEK 150,000 per country for the first application. The fee is somewhat reduced for renewals.

The APA procedure is generally relatively time-consuming as the competent authority has limited resources and demands high level of detail before they feel comfortable forming an opinion on the issue.

Transfer Pricing Audits

During the most recent years, the STA seems to have focused audits on companies involved in a re-structuring and/or transfer of intellectual property. Additionally, companies with branches or permanent establishments have also been subject to scrutiny. Finally and most importantly, loss-making entities/groups are always of particular interest to the STA.

Transfer Pricing Penalties

There are no specific penalties related to not preparing transfer pricing documentation. In case the STA considers that the pricing applied is incorrect, penalties of maximum 40% on the additional tax levied may be applied. Having compliant transfer pricing documentation in place may reduce potential penalties by half if certain criteria are met. Potential penalties can also be fully reduced if an open statement has been made in the tax return or if the transfer pricing issue is deemed very complex.

Local Hot Topics and Recent Updates

The recent interest rate increases by the central bank in Sweden and by central banks abroad have led to an increased focus on intra-group financial transactions. In Sweden, the central bank interest rate has been zero or even minus from late 2014 to mid-2022. This has however shifted as the interest rate has increased from the bottom peak -0.5% last recorded in 2019 to 4% in 2023.

As access to cash has been widely available and relatively cheap during the last decade many companies have financed their subsidiaries with loans. Depending on the interest rates applied within the group several issues may arise due to the increased interest rate on the market. Subsidiaries with a floating interest rate might struggle to pay the interest rates whilst in situations where a fixed interest rate has been applied on the intra-group loan, the parent company might face higher external interest costs compared to the level of intra-group interest income received.

Additionally, it is important to carefully plan the level of debt within the group to ensure that the Swedish interest deduction rules are efficiently applied.

Planning and pricing intra-group loans has thus become increasingly important at the same time as new guidance from the OECD (published in 2020) on financial transactions needs to be considered. Similar to many other jurisdictions, it is expected that controversy related to financial transactions will heavy increase in Sweden in the upcoming years.
